Philip L Hopper : Forest Green Glass (Schiffer Book for Collectors) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Forest Green Glass (Schiffer Book for Collectors):

Only includes descriptions for about 25% of my collection. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A Must For Collectors. By Swamp Creek Guy Excellent reference guide. Good color photos of the glass. Seems well researched. It would have been five stars if the original Anchor Hocking catalogue pages had been larger. 7 of 7 people found the following review helpful. Good representative book on Forest Green Glass. By always lookin' As a casual collector of Anchor Hocking forest green glass over 30 years, this was my first ever book I'd ever gotten (or seen) dedicated to my favorite type of glass. I was thrilled to see that nearly everything I had was represented and it gave me better background about the items. I used it that very weekend to recognize a small green vase I would otherwise have not known was anchor hocking (had gold paint on it). But don't use the prices as indications of the real value of the items, unless maybe yours are new-never-used still in original boxes. you couldn't sell your collection fo the prices listed I don't believe -- I'm still picking them up for just a few dollars at "junk" stores,and yard sales. And ebay items are never over $10.

This new book presents an important part of Anchor Hocking's glass production, the dark "Forest Green" styles made from the late 1950s through the mid-1960s. The history and variety of Forest Green glassware is precisely documented here, covering seventeen established patterns, many boxed sets, and a myriad of accessory pieces such as relish sets, ashtrays, lamps, vases, pitchers, and tumblers. These and many other styles are beautifully presented in over 300 gorgeous color photographs. Many pages of historical documentation are included to make this the most comprehensive reference guide to Anchor Hocking's Forest Green glassware.
